

Instructions for Authors

Journal of the Earth Simulator is directed not only to researchers in the earth science, but also to researchers from other academic fields as well as general readers who are interested in science and technologies. The journal is devoted to the publication of original research papers, technical articles, reviews, commentaries, proposals, opinions, introductions, and news, etc. with the aim of research promotions and disseminations.

Preparation of manuscripts

Manuscripts must be written in English. Since publishing staffs take care of the layout, it is unnecessary to submit manuscripts in a camera-ready form. Maximum length of manuscripts is not specified. (Details are presented in the “Author Guidelines for Journal of the Earth Simulator”)

Submission of manuscripts

Authors are requested to submit the manuscript to the Earth Simulator Center, after having it reviewed by editors. The text and tables should be prepared in an electronic form either as text files or files using popular word-processing software such as MS Word, and must be accompanied by a high quality printout copy. Figures and photographs, even if they are supposed to be inserted among the text, must be submitted independently in the form of electronic files with their printout copies. Figures and photographs can be either black-and-white or color. The submitted manuscripts will not be returned unless specifically requested. (Details are presented in the “Author Guidelines for Journal of the Earth Simulator”)

Copyright

The comprehensive copyright (including its utilization in electronic form) of the articles printed in the journal in principle belongs to the Earth Simulator Center. When quoting from other publications, authors should take into account the following issues: (a) to pay attention to the copyright of the given literature, (b) to get permission from the firm or publisher holding the copyright, before using figures, tables or photograph from other books and journals.
